The Indian Barrister. The event was organised in collaboration with Somerville College, Oxford, where Mrs. Sorabji did her studies. Somerville is a tutorial college, featuring women students from around the world. The event was a celebration of Sorabji’s achievements in the legal profession, highlighting her contributions as an advocate for women’s rights and equality.

Dr. Divya Sharma, one of the speakers at the event, discussed Sorabji’s legacy and the impact of her work on the legal profession. She highlighted Sorabji’s advocacy for women’s rights, particularly in the context of the Indian legal system, and how her work paved the way for future generations of women attorneys.

Navya Jannu, a descendant of Sorabji’s, shared personal anecdotes about her grandmother, emphasizing her dedication to education and her commitment to fighting for justice. Jannu’s words were a testament to Sorabji’s enduring legacy and her influence on the younger generation.

The event also featured speeches from various legal professionals, including judges and law firms, who discussed the importance of Sorabji’s contributions and the need to continue her work. The atmosphere was one of admiration and respect, with everyone present recognizing the significance of Sorabji’s impact on the legal profession.

In conclusion, the celebration of Sorabji’s 150th birth anniversary was a reminder of the importance of her work and the need to continue her legacy. As the world faces ongoing challenges, Sorabji’s spirit of advocacy and equality remains as relevant as ever, inspiring new generations to stand up for justice and fight for a better future.
