FROM THE PRINCIPAL

DR ALICE PROCHASKA

It is always a great pleasure to thank our donors for their wonderful generosity to Somerville.

In 2014-15 there were more meetings and special events than ever before for Somerville's friends and supporters; and if proof were needed that the Somerville community is in good shape, we celebrate in this report a higher level of donations than ever.

My own year of Somervillians celebrated our fiftieth anniversary of arriving in the College this summer. Those days seem remote, and the pleasure of meeting up again was tinged with memories of friends who have not survived these fifty years. The highlight of our reunion, for me, was to hear about the way people have used their opportunities. Becoming adult in the late 1960s, our generation experienced – though mostly at a distance – a world of protest and rebellion. Many went into teaching and other forms of public service, others flung themselves into activism and social experiment, some remain activists to this day, and the majority simply got on with the business of studying at Oxford, before going on to useful and rewarding lives in the world. Almost all of us felt fortunate to be here, a feeling common to Somervillians from every generation including current students. One of my tutors observed to a small group of us in those far-off days that the thing to do about privilege was not to rail against it but to live up to it.

I think we mostly did rise to the challenge of that Olympian adjuration. So too do today's Somerville students. Our students take on a wide range of voluntary service and exhibit between them a massive, collective social conscience. Most of the work that Somerville students do is measured in the intangible benefits of helping people or causes in need – the homeless, immigrant school children, environmental projects, their own peers, and so many others. The donors we thank in this report include members of the current student body; and it is gratifying to see how generations have joined together in our new crowdfunding projects to support special projects like Molly's Library in Ghana, or buy a new women's boat, or restore the volumes in the cherished library collection of John Stuart Mill.

Delighted as we all are, in Somerville, with the increasing level of donations and the growth in our permanent endowment, there is still so much that needs to be done. Some illustrious Somervillians past and present have acknowledged generously the help they were given when they were undergraduates coming from backgrounds that were anything but privileged. Our campaign to create Margaret Thatcher Scholarships honours the memory of one of those impecunious students. Thanks to some munificent donations, we are now able actively to shape the programme that will bring outstandingly gifted students in any subject to Somerville, with a special focus on those who have overcome adversity.

Two recent campaigns have funded tutorial fellowships in the Humanities (French and Philosophy), but other subjects also need your support. We plan to launch a new Dorothy Hodgkin Career Development Fellowship this year to support early career researchers in science (targeting women in particular); a campaign which we are running jointly with the department of Chemistry. Working with the Law School, we are raising funds for a graduate studentship in honour of the first Indian Somervillian Cornelia Sorabji (1880), who became the first woman to practice law in India. Law at Somerville has scored notable successes in the past year, and it features prominently in this report. I hope these pages will provide interest and some reward for the support that you, our thousands of donors, have given to the College. I send heartfelt thanks from all of us at Somerville.

DEVELOPMENT DIRECTOR'S REPORT

SARA KALIM

The generosity of the community of Somervillian alumni and friends is a source of tremendous support and encouragement to the College and means that students at Somerville are given an opportunity that is changing their lives.

Your support means that we can also continue to guarantee that experience for the generations to come. You have helped us reach a breath-taking total of £5.5m of donations this year and in doing so you continue to protect the student experience and help us preserve all that is exceptional about Somerville. We are immensely grateful for your support this year and it gives me great pleasure to outline here some of the impact which has been enabled by you.

What you have helped us to achieve this year

An unprecedented total of funds were raised for student scholarships and hardship funds with more than 20% of students receiving financial aid from the College. Some very large gifts received this year have been given for our special campaigns and appeals:

The Dorothy Hodgkin Career Development Fellowship will support women scientists at Somerville.

The Oxford India Centre for Sustainable Development will support the talent development of outstanding postgraduate students from India.

The Margaret Thatcher Scholarships will attract brilliant students from all over the world and support them through their studies.

This success notwithstanding, the permanent funding gap between income and the increasing costs of providing education at the highest level continues to put pressure on the College. For example, our tutorial system is still only half funded by our endowment which means we need to find an additional £0.5m each year to fund our teaching costs. See the profile of Chris Hare, Tutorial Fellow in Law on page 10, one of the areas of particular need within our teaching provision.

The Annual Fund supports all critical need ranging from teaching to hardship funds to maintaining the fabric of the College. Over half a million pounds was raised for the Annual Fund this year. More detail is given by our hugely energetic Annual Fund Officer, Heather Weightman, later in this report. This is an area of high priority so thank you again for allowing us to deploy your donations through the monthly direct debits, annual gifts, and support for our events (see box for the All Souls Fundraiser). Support for the Annual Fund was boosted by our group of Matched Fund Champions who provide an unrestricted fund which our student callers use over the course of the Telethon to encourage regular gifts to the College. Somervillians really engage with the exciting leverage that is made possible through this matching fund initiative.

There is something particularly special about the carefully considered bequests alumni leave to Somerville, often the greatest gift one can make. In 2014-15, almost £1.9m has helped underpin teaching support through the tutorial system this year. As thanks to alumni who have told us about their legacy plans (often after detailed discussion with us as to what area they would most like to support), we launched Somerville Will Power, our new Legacy Society. This allows us to invite alumni back to College each year with a celebratory lunch and entertainment to express our deep gratitude. More about Somerville Will Power on page 18-19.

All Souls Fundraiser

On a particularly beautiful July evening members of the Somerville City and Lawyers groups and guests enjoyed a rare opportunity to spend an evening in All Souls College, in support of our Annual Fund. All Souls provided the most stunning backdrop to a very convivial evening which included dinner hosted by the Principal and a fascinating tour of the Codrington Library and the Chapel given by Somervillian and All Souls Domestic Bursar Dr Sarah Beaver. This very special event was made possible thanks to the generosity of the Warden and Fellows of All Souls.

In addition to all of the above, you have done something very special for our current students by supporting their own initiatives through the College crowdfunding platform, somerville.hubbub.net. These projects have ranged from investing in our student entrepreneurs' mobile telephone apps, student film-making and the conservation work of one of the jewels in our crown, the John Stuart Mill Library. All of these directly and immediately enrich the lives of our student community. Furthermore, in the spirit of the Somerville culture of volunteering and charitable work, you have helped the Ghana Library project come to fruition.

Added to that, the travel grants, gifts to the Library and our first ever major choral scholarship, (more on page 13) have all greatly enhanced our provision this year.

In numbers, all of this means that 1,254 of you have made a gift this year which equates to one in five Somervillians helping us ensure that finance is not a barrier to education.

Special thanks

We are hugely grateful for the strategic guidance and indomitable go-getting energies of our Development Board, chaired by Clara Freeman (full list on page 27). We could not possibly execute the grand ambition to secure a shining future for Somerville without them and it is a great

Recognition and Naming Opportunities

Our wish is that all our donors receive the recognition and acknowledgement they deserve. We are pleased to see so many of you join us for the now regular annual events to celebrate your gifts, such as the Student Support Lunch, which offers a chance to meet Somerville students who benefit from your donations.

Many of you got involved in the "Make your Mark" campaign when the new ROQ student accommodation blocks were built. Many of you, through your donations, put your names on the buildings in some way, sometimes with moving tributes to those you wish to remember, a mother, a son, an inspirational teacher or friend. Some of you made "class gifts", gathering together to name a kitchen or bedroom. The students who now live in these rooms have told us that the plaques remind them that someone has given for them and inspire them to do the same when they are able.

There still remain naming opportunities in this building to name student rooms. There are numerous other ways of putting your name on a piece of Somerville, such as a plaque on your own student room, in the Library or a chair in Hall. If you would like to make your mark as an individual, family or group in this particular way, please do get in touch and we can give you further information.

source of strength as well as enjoyment to work with them as our lead volunteers.

Special thanks also to every member of the dynamic Development Office who always go above and beyond for Somerville. They work immensely hard to put on a substantial programme of events which encourage alumni to connect with each other, to make new friendships, to offer careers advice and to get involved in many other aspects of College life.

Thank you to each and every one of you for your support this year. You are making an enormous difference to the life of the College and enabling transformational change to the lives of our students. Please continue to support us.

TREASURER'S REPORT: ANDREW PARKER

Building on the success of last year, Somerville has seen an even stronger year with significant growth in the College's endowment in particular.

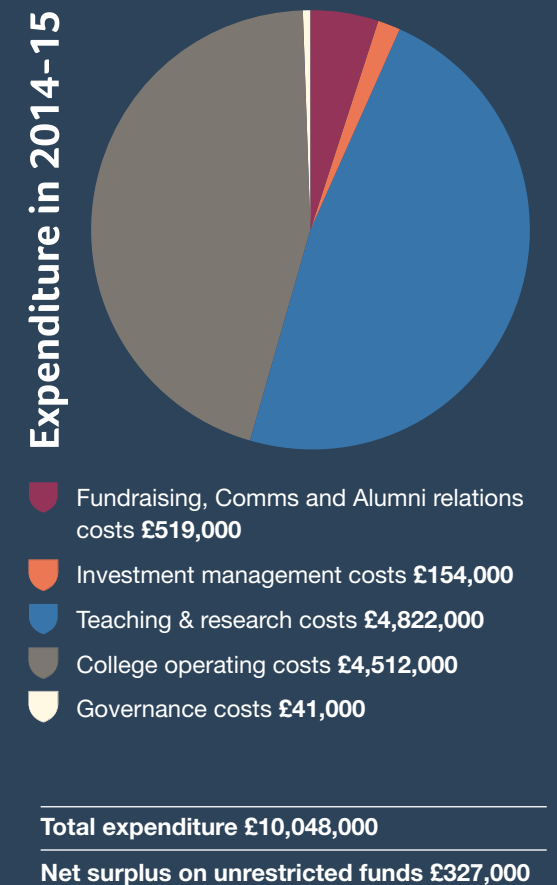

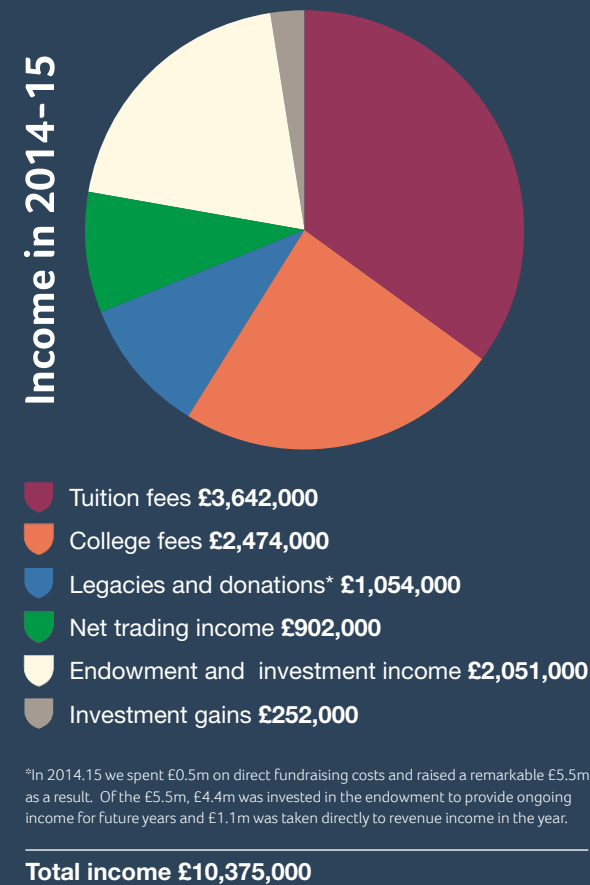

The net inflow of funds into the College in 2014-15 was £7.8m, pushing our net assets up from £69m at the start of the year to £77m at its close. The biggest single factor behind this was the strong growth in our endowment funds, up by 15% from £50m to £57m in the year. There were two main reasons for this; firstly receipts from legacies and donations to endowed funds were strong at £4.4m, (with the most significant items being £2.5m in donations into the Margaret Thatcher Scholarship Fund, and legacies and donations into our Fellowship Fund of £1m) and secondly our endowment funds enjoyed strong capital growth during the year of £3.2m (6.4%).

Endowment funds aside, we just managed to break even on our unrestricted funds (a result some way short of our stated aim of building unrestricted fund surpluses) and over coming years, as our activity continues to expand, we'll need to be mindful of living within our means in this area.

Nevertheless we were able to make progress with another of our core objectives, that of growing our free reserves (important both as a rainy day contingency and as a source for funding future capital expenditure) and we were able to do that largely because this is a relatively quiet period for capital expenditure. Free reserves now stand at £0.7m.

TOTAL GIVING FOR 2014-2015 WAS £5.5 MILLION

Somervillians have generously supported our efforts to endow our Fellows and students. Our challenge is to increase unrestricted income to meet core commitments. The accounts below include operating income and expenditure, and exclude income that goes directly into endowed funds.

Our restricted funds grew by £0.3m and the accumulated income on those funds, built up over the years now stands at £3.3m – a significant resource to be used to enhance the College's core activities over time.

Looking at our numbers overall the ongoing extent of our fundraising ambition is clear, manifesting itself both in the scale of the funds currently flowing into the College, and in the investment in fundraising resource. Both are at the top end of the spectrum across the Oxford Colleges.

As mentioned above this was a quiet year for capital expenditure. We refurbished the Darbshire SCR guests rooms, (which now boast en suite bathrooms!), and we refurbished bathrooms in Hostel. Over the next few years we are going to need to replace the dining hall roof, and the nursery is in significant need of a little TLC. Looking a little further ahead, we have also commissioned feasibility studies looking at significant refurbishments of the kitchen/pantry, and the Margery Fry and Vaughan accommodation blocks.

There is one further project currently in gestation which may or may not come to fruition. We are in fairly advanced discussions with a developer which if successful, and if the planners and funders look kindly upon us, would result in 140 additional student bedrooms, delivered via a combination of a new build on Penrose yard, and a long term lease on space on Little Clarendon Street. That space is currently configured as offices, but with permitted development rights for conversion into student accommodation. The next few months will be crucial.

TRANSFORMING LIVES: GEORGIA BRUCE

London-born Georgia Bruce came to Somerville to read Classics in 2013 and has greatly benefitted from The Jonny Roberts Bursary. She has been able to seize many amazing opportunities and is currently at the forefront of the flourishing Oxford drama scene.

Reading for a degree at Oxford is renowned for being more academically rigorous than most universities. With a combination of short terms and high levels of contact hours, due to Oxford's tutorial system, it is not unusual for a student to have to make sacrifices in their extracurricular life. With this in mind, it is impressive that Georgia Bruce is not only in her third year of a Classics degree, but also a key player on the Oxford drama scene, a member of the Somerville women's football team and has a self-titled music project.

Born and raised in London, Georgia attained bursaries to go to London School for Girls and then University College School London, which are both private schools. She achieved two As and an A* at A-Level in French, English and Latin and, despite her English teacher saying her marks wouldn't get her into Oxford, she gained a place at Somerville after a gap year. She had applied to Exeter but was pooled to Somerville and is confident that it was the best thing that could have happened to her. "I'm really genuinely happy that I got pooled here," she says. "Somerville has a great liberal, inclusive atmosphere which I think suits me perfectly – it probably suits everyone perfectly."

One of the advantages of a Classics degree, says Georgia, is being able to learn about a huge spectrum of different subjects. "I love literature and I feel I can do as much of that as I want in my free time," she says. "With Classics I'm able to do Philosophy, Art and Archaeology. You can easily tailor the course to fit your specific needs or desires – which is really good for me. I can never make up my mind so I just choose everything!"

And it is this sort of enthusiasm that would help formulate Georgia's love of the theatre. Despite both of her parents having acting careers before she was born, she never properly delved into the drama scene until she reached Oxford. In her first term she found herself playing the lead in an adaptation of Moliere's Hypochondriac and then – a chain smoking monkey in the Oxford Revue pantomime version of Aladdin.

Since then she hasn't stopped – performing in about ten plays in her first year, three in her second, as well as performing in the Edinburgh Fringe every year. At the point of writing, she has just finished playing the lead in Alice, a play by the Experimental Theatre Club playing at the Burton Taylor Studio. She is also the co-president of the Oxford Revue, an Oxford University comedy society whose members have included Stewart Lee, Rowan Atkinson and Alan Bennett.

Although Georgia has her work cut out for her, one thing she doesn't have to worry about is her financial situation as she is the recipient of The Jonny Roberts Bursary. The bursary was set up in memory of History student, Jonathan Roberts, who was in a road accident in his first year at Somerville in 2011. Every year since, the Roberts family have awarded one student the bursary in his memory.

"The Jonny Roberts Bursary has helped me massively," says Georgia. "I probably couldn't have been here otherwise. Having a proper, fulfilled, genuine existence in Oxford does require some money and, given the amount I do and the amount of work you have here, getting a job isn't an option"

Upon leaving Somerville, Georgia is hoping to pursue a career either in acting or the arts. "Being in the Oxford drama scene, you are surrounded by people who are dead set on pursuing a career in acting for the rest of their lives. It's very hard not to pick up on that slightly but I'm a bit more tentative. I recognise if it doesn't work out I'll think of a plan B but I'll always aim for somewhere within the arts sector."

Despite all this extra-curricular activity, Georgia says the most memorable part of the last few years has been reading Classics at Somerville. "The most rewarding aspect of my time at university has to be the academic side," she says. "With everything I've learned and all the work I have achieved I just feel like I have gained so much in so many ways since I moved here. A lot of that is rooted in academic work, but it's also rooted in my life as a whole."

Special thanks from the JCR President: Louis Mercier (PPE, 2014)

In just one year, Louis Mercier went from feeling unsure about whether he belonged at Oxford University to running the Junior Common Room at Somerville.

The first time I applied to Oxford I wasn't accepted. Applying again was the best decision of my life, not only because it meant that I had achieved my dream of reading Politics, Philosophy and Economics at Oxford University, but also because I got into Somerville. Any doubts that had lingered over my abilities – of whether I truly belonged here – were soon dissipated, and within a few weeks I had claimed this College as my home.

Somerville's atmosphere of inclusion and support from both tutors and students, as well as its continual push for academic distinction, has led me to grow immensely over the last year in confidence and ability. I am only one of many students who have benefitted from Somerville's culture of support and acceptance. As I have learned from working on this year's annual Telethon, much of the support that we are given as undergraduates is only available thanks to the generosity of our alumni. I look forward to the day that I am able to give back to the College too. On behalf of the JCR, I would like to extend my gratitude to all our alumni for everything they have done for the College.

INVESTING IN ACADEMIC EXCELLENCE: RAISING THE BAR IN LAW AT SOMERVILLE

Law is a strong subject at Somerville and yet, despite this, the teaching provision is dramatically under-funded with only 31% of costs funded by our endowment. This leaves an annual shortfall of £96k. Two Somerville students achieved the best marks overall in Law at Oxford last year. We celebrate their success and profile them with Somerville Law Professor, Chris Hare.

Only three years ago, catching a ferry to work on the sunny coast of New Zealand was part of Professor Chris Hare's daily routine. Before Hare was Somerville's Fellow in Law, he spent seven years teaching at the University of Auckland after seeing an ad for the post in The Times. "My wife and I didn't have any children at that point so we thought, why not? We'd never been to New Zealand before but it sounded like a great adventure."

Chris, originally from Bolton, first studied Law at Cambridge and was in the first cohort of students to spend their third year at the University of Poitiers, France. He then attended Harvard for a year to do his LLM and went to Oxford for a BCL. "I find the area fascinating — it's about how you take the building blocks of our law and make them work in sophisticated financial transactions," says Hare.

Practicing as a barrister in London, Hare realised his true passion was in teaching and he went back to Cambridge for a five-year post at Jesus College. Chris then moved to New Zealand and, after having two children, decided to come back to the UK where he was awarded the Somerville Law Fellowship in 2013.

"During the interview I really warmed to the place," says Chris on his first impressions of Somerville. "Everyone was really welcoming and friendly. I was really pleased when they offered me the post, because even before they did I thought this could be the place where I would really enjoy staying."

Chris says that by working in New Zealand he gained a fresh perspective on being a comparative lawyer. "They look at other jurisdictions. In England, legally, we tend to think we're the centre of the world whereas in New Zealand, because they know they're a small jurisdiction, they'll look at what the UK does, or what Australia does or what Canada does. It makes you much more outward looking and I think that continues in my writing now."

His current research asks whether banks should expect more from their customers in light of the new digital age of banking. "At the moment the law states that you can throw away bank statements unread and the bank should bear the risk," he says. He is also writing, with two New Zealand academics, a second edition of a Company Law book focused on New Zealand.

Law's shortfall is made up by the fundraising efforts of the College, but there are areas where funds are needed. Hare says that students, particularly postgraduates, with huge potential often apply but are eventually drawn to other universities or colleges with a bigger budget.

Cornelia Sorabji: the first Indian woman to practise Law

Cornelia Sorabji came to Somerville in 1889 and was not only Somerville's first Indian student, but the first Indian woman to study at any British University. Cornelia Sorabji was only able to take up her place at Oxford due to last-minute petitioning and fundraising. Somerville's founding Principal, Madeleine Shaw Lefevre, was among those active in raising funds to enable her to come to England.

To celebrate her legacy, Somerville College and the Faculty of Law, Oxford, are launching a joint fundraising appeal for the Cornelia Sorabji Scholarship in Law. The scholarship will provide a life-changing opportunity for a top-flight trainee Indian lawyer to study at Oxford's Faculty of Law and live at Somerville College. It will be awarded to a candidate with an exceptional academic record who wishes to use their skills in India over the long-term.

This year, two of Somerville's law students, Talita de Souza Dias and Tobias Lutzi, came first and second in the entire MJur cohort. Both students were awarded the Principal's Prize as well as Archibald Jackson Prizes. Talita de Souza Dias was awarded the Clifford Chance Prize for the Best Performance in MJur as well as receiving the Law Faculty Prize in International Law and Armed Conflict. Tobias Lutzi was second and was awarded the Clifford Chance MJur Prize Proxime Accessit.

Talita de Souza Dias

Talita was born and raised in Recife — a city in the Northeast region of Brazil — and stayed in the country to complete a degree in law at the Universidad Federal de Pernambuco. Pursuing the MJur at Oxford came with several challenges.

After three years of hard work as an intern and then a law clerk, Talita spent all of her savings to pay for her tuition fees and living expenses at Oxford. In addition to her financial sacrifices, she had to stay away from her family and friends for the whole duration of the course, since neither she nor they could afford the costs of flights. This being said, Talita says that Somerville's College environment was a key factor in her academic success.

"I absolutely loved being a part of Somerville's community," she says. "I was honoured to meet the Principal, Dr Alice Prochaska, and I am incredibly grateful to my College tutors, especially Dr Julie Dickson. In my department, I have had the opportunity of meeting exceptional scholars, both from the university and others just visiting. Moreover, some of the other MJur and BCL students are now my friends for life."

Currently, Talita is an intern at the International Criminal Court in The Hague, where she provides legal assistance to one of the judges and her legal officer. As International Criminal Law is Talita's passion, working at the ICC is the realisation of an old dream.

"The Clifford Chance Prize was a confirmation that my passion and effort for what I do are too big to be ever set aside," says Talita. "Despite all the financial difficulties that I still face, it has given me enormous motivation to pursue my next career plan, namely to go back to Oxford for a DPhil — this time, hopefully, with the scholarship that I so need."

Tobias Lutzi

When Tobias was 10 years old and living in the German city of Kassel, where he was born and raised, he happened to be watching a TV show whose main character was a self-employed lawyer. This moment sparked a fascination with law that Tobias has maintained throughout his academic career.

"What inspired me was not so much what he did, but how he did it — the way he argued and solved problems of everyday life by using legal reasoning," he says. "I have never lost this fascination of the way in which lawyers construe a legal system that accommodates, ideally, every problem and relationship of social life."

Tobias pursued his dream and was accepted to study law at the University of Cologne in Germany, and then completed his Masters at the Sorbonne Law School at the University of Paris. His research interests are private international law, international commercial arbitration and IT law.

Tobias was drawn to the postgraduate program because it allows candidates to study in the same way undergraduates do — in the form of tutorials complemented by lectures. "The programme has given me an insight into the common law system which I would not have dreamed of obtaining within a single academic year," he says.

Since Tobias's first semester of study, he knew he wanted to stay in academia. His time at Somerville, he says, encouraged and enabled him to further pursue this dream. "Somerville is a fantastic College in every regard, a wonderful community of students, scholars, and staff, which has supported me throughout the last year in every way I could have hoped for. I have thus never hesitated to stay in Somerville for my MPhil."

THE ANNUAL FUND

Huge thanks to our Somervillians, parents and friends who joined together last year to offer a record-breaking level of support for the College's Annual Fund, which immediately and directly benefits our students.

Somerville is a truly wonderful place. Since its foundation in 1879, philanthropic support from our alumni and friends has been at the core of College life – helping us to maintain our commitment to high academic standards, ground-breaking research and ensuring that the best and brightest minds attend Somerville, regardless of financial background. The Annual Fund underpins our core activities and strengthens the whole educational experience of our students. In short, the Fund helps us to ensure that College can remain a world-class educational institution and continues to provide current students with the same opportunities and experiences enjoyed by Somervillians before them.

Gifts to the Annual Fund are essential to all that is achieved at College. Through donations to the Fund, our undergraduates and graduates continue to be greatly supported and are truly grateful for the generosity of the Somerville community. In the past year, 21% of our undergraduates who needed additional financial assistance received a bursary, with Somerville firmly establishing its place as one of the top colleges for student provision within the University and supporting Somerville's key ethos of diversity and equal opportunities in education.

The Telethon plays an essential role in supporting our Annual Fund and the 2014 campaign was a record one for College, raising an impressive £312,000 from alumni, friends and parents over the course of two weeks prior to Michaelmas term. Our team of student callers thoroughly enjoyed speaking with alumni from all over the world and sharing their experiences of life at Somerville. It was wonderful to see the warmth that the community continues to hold for the College with over 55% of those spoken with choosing to make a gift. It was also the second year of using a 'Matched Fund' which was supported by a group of generous alumni following on from the success of the initiative in 2013. The 2014 matched fund provided £53,000 of unrestricted gifts to assist the callers' efforts, matching donations from Somervillians who chose to make regular gifts for the first time. We would also like to take this opportunity to thank all the Matched Fund Champions who participated in the 2015 initiative and we look forward to reporting on the successes of our most recent Telethon next year.

Somerville is a pioneering College and this year we launched a new and exciting initiative to help enhance our student experience. The Somerville Crowdfunding Platform (somerville.hubbub.net) launched in March has since raised over £36,000 towards student-led projects and was the first of its kind within Oxbridge and the third Higher Education platform within the UK. Launching with the Somerville Women's Boat Club campaign in order to raise funds for a much needed new boat for the First team and the refurbishment of the Second boat, the platform provided a perfect tool to garner philanthropic support and help the women drive forward their recent successes on the river. Raising over £8,300 in less than three weeks from the generous support of alumni and friends, the team were able to purchase the new equipment with which the Women's Second team won Blades only a few weeks later.

The platform has since hosted a further seven crowdfunding projects including the campaign to raise much needed support for the initial preservation work required for one of Somerville's treasures, the John Stuart Mill Library, and another successful campaign to rescue Somerville's Ghana Library project, Molly's Library (p.16-17). The platform is extremely popular amongst the student community and we look forward to hosting new student and College projects over the coming year.

We are hugely appreciative for the Matched Fund Champions who joined in for the 2014 Telethon - thank you very much.

CHLOE AND HELEN MORTON CHORAL SCHOLARSHIPS

Inspired by the memory of Helen's mother Chloe, the Scholarships were created to continue giving the gift of music, with the first two Somerville singers receiving awards this year.

The award was set up by Helen Morton — Somerville's Treasurer from September 2000 to December 2012 — after her mother, Chloe, died in December 2013. The scholarship was founded to celebrate Chloe Morton's interest in singing and music, a passion that was passed down to Helen.

"I hope that others will join me in setting up similar choral scholarships," says Helen. "I believe it is a good way to encourage and support young singers and enable them to have regular singing lessons. I also hope that the Scholarships will help the Somerville Choir to maintain the high standard that it has achieved in recent years."

Helen has been singing and playing music since she was a child, first in the school choir and then in choirs at Cambridge University. She took singing lessons at the Guildhall School of Music and Drama in London, where she lived for much of her working life, and sang with Morley College Opera and other London opera groups for several years. Currently, Helen does occasional solo work but mostly sings with choirs.

As part of the award, the scholars put on a performance for Helen, the Principal and the Fellows at Somerville. "I thought it went very well," says Helen. "Their performance coincidentally included some of the songs and operatic arias that I remember learning when I was having singing lessons and I very much enjoyed watching and hearing both of them sing. I thought they gave an excellent concert!"

Carys Miller

Since Carys Miller (English, 2014) was 13 years old, she always wanted to follow in her grandfather's footsteps and go to Oxford. Growing up in Milton Keynes, Carys played cello and had singing lessons at the Royal Academy of Music. While studying French, history and politics at the Stanbory Campus in Milton Keynes, her love of music was always present – as her mother is a music teacher.

For her scholarship, Carys trains with up and coming soprano singer Rachel Nichols. Although she is studying English at Somerville, Carys is still part of the music community at the College as an active member of the Somerville Choir. "The Scholarship recital has been the highlight of my time here so far," she says. "I really felt I was part of the College and I was being recognised."

Katie Jeffries-Harris

Katie Jeffries Harris' (Music 2013) interest in music began when her mother made her learn piano. She sang in community choirs in Peterborough, where she has lived most of her life, and then joined the Peterborough Youth Choir which she is still involved in today. As part of her scholarship, Katie trains with Professor Sally Burgess, a British operatic lyric mezzo soprano, opera director and Fellow at the Royal College of Music.

It wasn't until sixth form, when Katie won a scholarship to go to Chetham's School of Music in Manchester, that going to Oxford crossed her mind. "It was quite normal at Chetham's to have at least seven or eight students go to Oxford so I thought I might have a go and look around — only I actually got in, which was very surreal! It's been really, really amazing, I've thoroughly enjoyed it."

PROFESSOR EDWINA BROWN: SUPPORTING BURSARIES AT SOMERVILLE

Professor Edwina Brown (1967, Medicine) was always destined to go to Somerville. Her mother, Irene Brown, read history at Somerville in 1939. After working in the India Office during WWII her mother got married to a husband who didn't want her to work. She then dedicated her life to the education of her daughter and two sons. Edwina's brothers went to Cambridge, while she followed in her mother's footsteps and became a Somervillian.

Growing up with two brothers was not by any means the only time Edwina would experience an imbalance of female representation. "I did my Oxford entrance and two terms of biology A-level from the Edinburgh Academy — which was a boys' public school in Edinburgh," she says. "I was the first girl in the boys' school which was brilliant training for a career in medicine because for many years I was the token woman. Now it's 50/50 but it certainly wasn't when I started!"

Edwina cites her decision to study medicine on parental pressure — "I don't think that's very politically correct these days" she says — and was soon invited for an interview at Somerville. When she made the long journey down from Edinburgh, she had her admissions interview on a Friday and then her scholarship interview on the following Monday. Over the weekend, she first met and was looked after by her soon to be tutor in Medicine, Dr Jean Banister.

"I remember her taking me to her lab and very proudly showing me the calculator she had just got — which was a huge machine," she says. "I remember being ever so impressed by this machine that could subtract and multiply. Of course now technology is just extraordinary,"

Life at Somerville

In 1967, Edwina was accepted to read medicine at Somerville and was granted a scholarship. It was deemed an honour for scholars to do solo essays and take solo tutorials, while the other girls had tutorials in pairs. "I have no idea how Ms. Bannister did that," says Edwina. "I do a lot of teaching now and I much prefer to have a small group so that you can generate ideas."

Edwina looks back at her days at Somerville fondly, remembering the new sense of freedom, the hard work, the close community and the strong friendships made while she was there. Her class was small with only five girls with whom she still remains close — "in fact, I saw one of them last night," she says.

A Career in Medicine

Following three years in Oxford, she did her clinical studies at University College Hospital Medical School in London. After qualifying, her first house job was at Hillingdon Hospital in nephrology (kidney disease).

Luckily for Edwina, this first work placement sparked a lifelong interest that she has pursued for the rest of her career — peritoneal dialysis, dialysis in the elderly and renal supportive care. "It was my first job and I loved it," she says. "I like the holistic side of it; you get to know people because you look after your patients for years."

Within two years of qualifying, she managed to get a training post at Yale which put her onto her career path. Edwina then moved to London and completed her training at Charing Cross Hospital and after many years as a senior registrar, eventually became a consultant at Charing Cross. At that time, she was the only female consultant nephrologist in England.

As well as her clinical and research work, Edwina has always enjoyed teaching and oversaw undergraduate medical student teaching as Director of Clinical Studies at Charing Cross Hospital for 10 years. Today she continues to teach clinical students and provide welfare support at the Imperial College Renal and Transplant Centre at Hammersmith Hospital.

"Over time it became more and more obvious to me that we shouldn't be assessing the quality of our care for patients with long term conditions by factors that are easy to measure, like certain blood tests or things that interest doctors. I believe the emphasis should be on what interests patients and their quality of life," she says.

She has taken these views into her teaching at Imperial College and as part of the course, first year students are allocated a chronic patient who they have to see at least four times over the year. By doing so, the students learn what it's like to be a patient with a long-term condition before they know any medicine.

Another major part in Edwina's career has been getting involved with end of life decision-making and care. She's published many academic papers on the subject, written a handbook for Oxford University Press and runs the only renal patient supportive care course in the UK.

Enabling Students

While having an aspirational career in medicine, Edwina has not forgotten her Somervillian roots. After her mother died in 2008, Edwina and her brothers set up a bursary in her mother's name as a way to honour her love of the College. The Irene Brown Bursary is a unique bursary that was set up to support students with learning difficulties.

Edwina's younger brother has a son with significant learning problems and had already set up a fund to help people with learning difficulties called the "Don't Leave Me As I Am" charity. The three siblings agreed that the Irene Brown Bursary was the perfect way to pay homage to their mother's interest in Somerville as well as helping people. The bursary has since supported many students at Somerville and last year Edwina met a music student who shared her great appreciation for the support.

"I was involved at Imperial with the student welfare board at the time my mother died, so I was very aware that there are students with major health problems," she says. "Students with disabilities have increased costs that are not covered by government grants and we thought that funding support for students with health problems would aid them in their College life."

MOLLY'S LIBRARY

Somerville student Martha Maclaren (2014, History and German), with the help of the kind donors who supported Molly's Library through the Somerville Crowdfunding Platform, spent the summer in Ghana.

I was lucky enough to travel to Ghana in September to help with Molly's Library, the College's project to support literacy in Ghana. Somervillian Hattie Begg met philanthropist Molly Yankey on her gap year and they talked about the problem of illiteracy in Cape Coast, a large town in Ghana's Central Region. Hattie wanted to make a difference, so with the help of fellow Somervillians she established the Library in 2003, and students have been active in running it ever since – sending out books, visiting almost every summer and fundraising throughout the year for rent, librarians' wages, repairs and new resources.

As of last year Molly was no longer able to rent the Library building, and had to move the books to a temporary building. Molly told JCR Charities Officer Angelica, who decided to set up a crowdfunding page to raise money to build a new Library, providing a permanent solution.

Angelica, Heather from the Development Office and a group of students ran the crowdfunding campaign for £9000 to cover the cost of the whole building, in just 3 weeks. This involved fundraising (including a karaoke night, bake sale and charity formal), raising money in the JCR charities ballot, contacting businesses who might be interested and publicising the campaign through social media to reach out to family, friends and alumni who might want to donate. We are so happy that we managed to save the Library and really grateful to everyone who donated.

I travelled to Ghana with a friend from Austria who was keen to help with the Library, and we stayed at Molly's house for two weeks while working at the Library. As the library is run by Somerville students, we had free rein to do what we wanted and help plan its future. In the first few days we sorted the books into categories – they'd been jumbled up on the move to the temporary building. There is a good range of books; plenty of school and university textbooks in different subjects, and many adults' novels and children's books. We also read over and adapted the instructions that previous Somervillians had left for the librarians, began a new log for taking out books, and learned from the temporary librarian about how the Library works. The temporary Library has been closed for the past few months because of security issues; people had been taking chairs and books due to the less secure building and there being only one librarian, as opposed to the usual two. However, we have high hopes for the Library's future, as Molly will be hiring two permanent librarians for the new building, which will be secure and will consist of a librarian's office, store, toilet and main room. Furthermore, we met the headmistress from the local Junior High School, who assured us she would send her students to study at the library, and when open Molly and the librarians will publicise the Library in the rural villages in the vicinity.

In the two weeks we were at the Library we were fortunate enough to see the new building, on the same site as the temporary Library, shoot up – the builders were laying the concrete over the foundations when we arrived, and had almost finished the walls by the time we left! We offered to lend a hand but we would have been more of a hindrance than a help with our lack of building experience! However, we did help out on the farm across the road, also owned by Molly; one afternoon we hoed a new area to grow vegetables, watered the lettuces and watched the pigs being fed. We also spent several hours at the nursery and primary school onsite, playing with the children, teaching English and Maths, and singing and dancing with them. We also gave the young, unqualified teachers tips and teaching methods to try to teach by dictation, spelling out and repetition. Oli, the Charities Officer from St Peter's College, happened to be in Ghana at the same time, and came to the Library and school for a few days. He brought his ukulele which was a great hit with the children, and the three of us, with the help of Michael the librarian and George (who lives with Molly and accompanied us to the Library every day), made two big, bright signs – one for the librarians, began a new log for taking out books, and one for the roadside, to advertise the library, and one for the new building.

The rest of our trip was also amazing – we saw the slave castle, met other volunteers and visited Molly's church in Cape Coast. We went on a night walk, a dawn canopy walk and slept in a huge treehouse in Kakum rainforest. We ate breakfast over a crocodile-filled lake and visited an ostrich farm, stayed in a hut directly on the beach, drank from coconuts and swam in the sea at Beyin. We went on a beautiful canoe ride to a stilted village over a lake, travelled to Mole National Park in the north, where we saw elephants (10 metres away), waterbok, kob, bushbuck, warhogs and monkeys (and a baboon stole our bread!), stayed in a mud-hut homestay in an eco-village, and finally camped at a backpacking spot just outside Accra. Travelling in a group of two or three was a fantastic experience – deciding our own route, staying in some lovely (and some more dubious) places, riding countless tro-tros (very cheap death-traps disguised as minibuses), living on rice and street food, and getting to know the locals, who were so friendly and helpful.

Our experiences at the Library showed us what a vital community resource it is, in an area with no other public libraries, and how lucky we are with our educational opportunities in the UK. Molly and her family were so welcoming and unbelievably grateful for our help with the Library, and wanted us to thank all of the Somerville community who helped or donated to the crowdfunding campaign – it really is greatly appreciated.

MARTHA MACLAREN (2014, History and German)

SOMERVILLE WILL POWER

We are delighted that the new legacy society has been so warmly received, and very grateful for the generosity of our members. Fresher Charlotte Thornton shares her experience as the first beneficiary of Lady Arthur's legacy.

The first recipient of Lady Arthur's legacy, Charlotte Thornton (2015, Psychology).

Lady Arthur's Legacy

Lady Arthur, née Margaret Woodcock, left a legacy to Somerville to provide assistance to students in financial need. This year her generous support has enabled the award of five bursaries to Somerville students – support that they can count on for the duration of their studies. Charlotte Thornton is one of the first students to benefit: "I am in my first year at Somerville studying Experimental Psychology. I am a keen hockey player and hope to be a part of both the College and the University team. It is through my sport that I feel I can escape academic pressures, ensuring a more stress-free and enjoyable university experience.

Since joining Somerville, I have also become a member of the Oxford Union. Without the help of the bursary that Lady Arthur provided, this would not have been possible due to the Union's costly membership price. It is in situations such as these that I am entirely grateful for the financial support that the bursary provides. With it, I can be open to the countless opportunities that Oxford offers, such as the Union, without worrying about whether I can afford to be involved. The support has already enabled me to enjoy my time at Oxford so much more than I otherwise would have. Despite only having been here for less than six weeks, I can already see the impact it is having on me which, I am sure, will continue throughout my three years here."

Thank You

Every kind gift we receive makes a huge difference to the College and to future generations of students. We are grateful to those of you who have chosen to remember Somerville in your Will; please accept our sincere thanks for your foresight and generosity.

Somerville Will Power

Recognising the transformative role that legacies have played in the history of the College and continue to play today is very important to us. And to that end, we have created a new legacy society, Somerville Will Power.

The society recognises the special effort and commitment made by alumni and friends who have pledged a legacy or a planned gift to Somerville. The suggestion for the name was offered during a Q&A session at one of our reunion events last year and was met by a warm ripple of laughter and enthusiastic support, then and throughout the year. It became clear that the name captures something about the unique relationship that Somervillians have with the College, and so we launched Somerville Will Power last summer. Members receive an exclusive lapel pin, an invitation to a special annual event and are kept abreast of news and developments in College. If you would like to find out more, please contact Brett de Gaynesford (brett.degaynesford@some.ox.ac.uk).
