It is among the most international of the Oxford colleges that admit both undergraduate and graduate students. The College's ethos of tolerance, friendliness, diversity and enabling access to research and learning for all underpins the pursuit of excellence in all that we do.

Our alumni community is extensive and exceptionally loyal, ranging from notable politicians, including two prime ministers (Indira Gandhi and Margaret Thatcher), scientists including several renowned medical pioneers and the only British woman so far to win a Nobel Prize for science, the crystallographer Dorothy Hodgkin, to prize-winning entrepreneurs, famous philosophers and a long and illustrious chain of novelists. The College is proud of its traditions of public service among not only alumni of all generations, but also our current Fellows and students.

The income of the College, a self-governing educational charity, stems from academic fees, residential, catering and conference operations, endowment, and unrestricted donations and legacies.

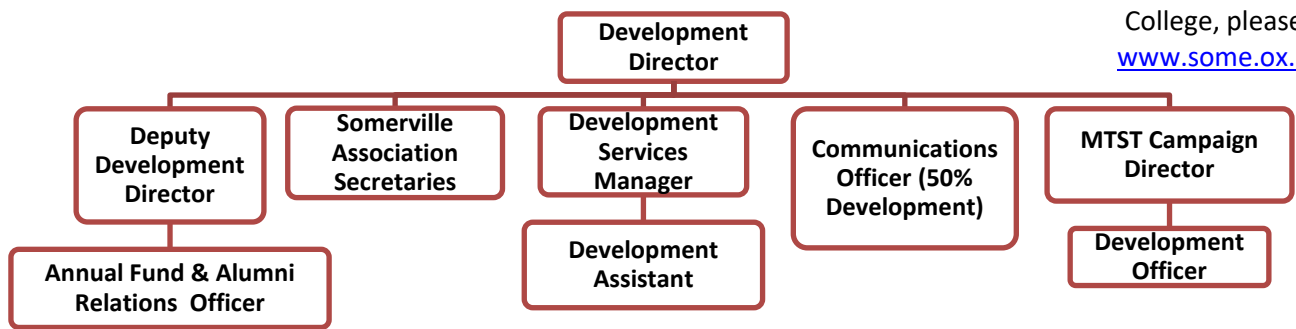

The College has ambitious plans to support its international profile in research and teaching, with the creation of facilities and studentships honouring the names of some of our most illustrious alumni. Already in place is a programme for the Oxford India Centre for Sustainable Development which provides scholarships for Indian students on postgraduate courses within the University of Oxford in areas related to sustainable development and related interdisciplinary research. The Margaret Thatcher Scholarship Trust, set up by the College in 2013, aims to provide support for students at all levels and from any part of the world, regardless of social, religious, cultural or political background. It is now about to start making its first awards.
